

HONORING THE PAST. PROVIDING FOR THE FUTURE.

Queens has been a special place for more than 160 years. Estate gifts to the university have allowed Queens to flourish during that time.

Queens provides an innovative education that's rooted in tradition, offering a personal, small-college experience with all the benefits of being located in a growing, dynamic city. We honor our history while keeping an eye on what comes next. We are committed to developing future generations of enlightened, productive leaders and discovering new, better ways of doing things.

Queens recognizes donors who create planned gifts to the university with membership in the Albright Legacy Society, which honors Professor Emerita and former Dean of Students, Thelma Albright. Though Ms. Albright passed in 2000, her six-decade impact on Queens was undeniable and is still felt today. She was recognized with the Algernon Sydney Sullivan award, an Honorary Alumna award, the naming of Albright Residence Hall and an Honorary Doctorate degree. The Albright Legacy Society reflects Thelma Albright's devotion to Queens as well as her role in developing minds and character, just as planned gifts will do for decades to come.

By including Queens in your estate plans, you are powerfully embodying our motto - non Ministrari, sed Ministrare, not to be served, but to serve. Your gift ensures that the Queens experience will be available to students for the next 160 years and beyond.

“ I attribute much of my success to the opportunities and connections I've made at Queens given its familiar nature. The generosity of Queens donors have made my incredible experience here possible. Without financial assistance, I would not have been able to attend this university. Their support has profoundly changed my life and my gratitude cannot be overstated. I hope that I am able to pay their generosity forward once I graduate and begin my career as a public servant. ”

“ I am overwhelmed with gratitude for the institution that provided me with such a firm foundation for my life. Queens fostered my lifelong desire for learning, evaluating change and embracing discovery. I hope my bequest will aid future students as Queens continues to evolve and will provide a solid foundation for them as they move through the years. ”
